Workforce Trends

Population

Lemhi County has depended on mining for most of its history, and the last decade reflects it. The population steadily eroded early in the decade before resuming growth. The county's population was 7,723 people in 2016. Salmon, ID is Lemhi County's largest city ranking 44th in the state with a population of 3,504 people. Recent population fluctuations have been minor and remained relatively unchanged from 2012.

Cobalt and rare earth metals have sparked interest in new mining development. There is still discussion of selling and restarting mines. In the past several years, the county has also built a business incubation center, a large hospital and the impressive Sacajawea Education & Interpretive Center. Efforts to improve local schools are also underway.

Labor Force & Employment

Lemhi County's unemployment rate hit 10.3 percent in peak recession times. Since then the county is diversified while capitalizing on its strengths. Summer fires over the last decade, some requiring national help, temporarily boosted employment. But the county has rebounded with the support of residents and leaders. The 2016 average unemployment rate decreased for the fifth consecutive year to 6.3 percent.

Government employs 34 percent of the county's workers. Over 90 percent of the land is owned by the federal government so land management agencies like the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and the Idaho Fish and Game Department employ many. Nonfarm payroll jobs do not include employers involved in agriculture. Total acreage for cattle is almost as high as total acreage for crops.

Trade, transportation and utilities along with leisure and hospitality employ 30 percent of the labor force. Trade represents many jobs not only in food stores, restaurants and bars but also in auto dealerships, which serve a large geographic area that includes Montana and Wyoming.

Increased diversification will help limit recessionary effects. Much of the unemployment is the result of layoffs, resulting in declining employment and rising unemployment.

Covered Employment & Wages

Since 2006 covered employment has decreased 11 percent. Job and wage growth was minimal, growing slightly more than 3 percent in 2016. As jobs declined wages increased. Other services was the only sector to experience a significant gain in employment in 2016, 38 percent with an 11 percent increase in wages.

Covered employment includes jobs subject to state and federal unemployment insurance laws. These laws apply to approximately 92 percent of Idaho's employers.
