Population

Lewis County's population grew 4 percent from 3,712 in 2006 to 3,853 in 2016, while U.S. population grew 8 percent and Idaho's population grew 15 percent.

Declining job opportunities in natural resource-based industries caused some young families to move out over the last 20 years. This exodus was partially offset by the influx of retirees looking for rural charm, safety, scenic beauty, and hunting and fishing opportunities. As a result, the county skews older than most counties.

The 2016 populations of the county's incorporated cities were 1,292 in Kamiah, 499 in Craigmont, 474 in Nezperce, 347 in Winchester, and 64 in Reubens.

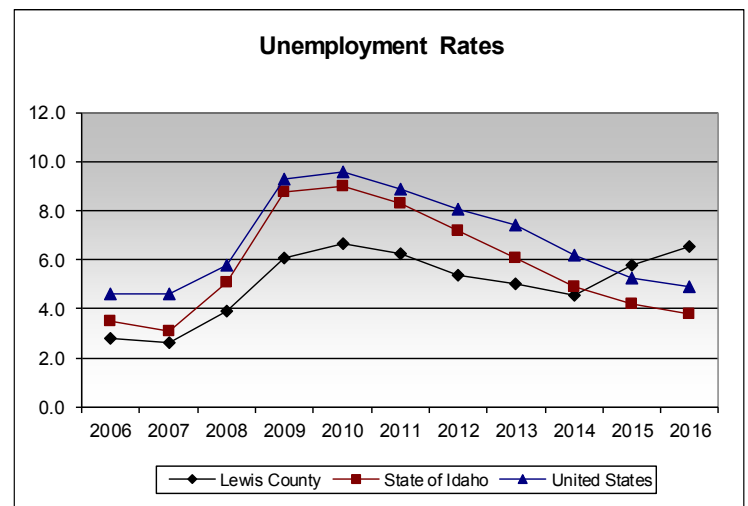

Labor Force & Employment

Lewis County remains heavily dependent on natural resource, especially agriculture and forest products. Farm income is a major factor in the spending power of county residents. High prices for wheat, cattle and other commodities boosted the local economy a few years ago, but now low prices for wheat and other products are reducing farm incomes and therefore spending by farmers.

Over time the forest products industry has lost jobs, but it remains a major source of employment in several communities. In May 2016, the Blue North Forest Products mill Kamiah, closed, putting 66 people out of work. Today, 120 people work at sawmills and another 70 work in the logging industry.

About 80 people work for other manufacturers. The largest is Hillco Technologies, a Nezperce company making equipment to keep farm combines level.

The county's tourism industry remains small. Public lands including Winchester State Park provide recreational opportunities, attracting tourists and potential residents.

Two years ago, the Nez Perce-Clearwater National Forests opened their headquarters in Kamiah.
